THE molancholy news received by telegraph resterday morning was not unexpected. The Czan of Rassia had been seriously ill for some time, and the bulletins had of late been increasingly unfavourable, so that the infination of his death, though it has was a sad and a heavy one? It is no secret that from the time of his accession, on the 1st March, 1831, he has gone about ever in terror of death, but such a peaceful, one as his last end probably was, but a frightful mutilation by bomb, or infernal machine, the Liberator. The late CZAR was a witness of his honented sire's fearful death, C. has for the last three years showed heavy deficits. and the colony pleads argently for the reduction of the military contribution to a sum more in accordance with its circumstances. As it stands. it is estimated that, taking into consideration the low rate of exchange, and the fall in vo onial revenue the contribution of £ 100,000 represents for this year an average of 22 per cent, upon the autira revenue of the colony. Public works have been stopped. Education his, it is alleged, been checked, and the responsibility for all shortcomings is laid upon the military contribution. It is a state of things which cannot be viewed without regret. The colony has good ground for the contention that the added cost of its defence les fallen upon it in consequence of the Imperial. importance of Singapore. The entire expense is. now calculated at £136.000 a year. The Imperial Government has recognized its liability for a portion of this sum. That being so, and the matter of principle being thus yielded on both sigles, the colonial proposal to increase its origimal contribution from £50,000 to £70,000 seems to present a fair compromise based on calculation of the respective interests to be served.
